About the Conference

For last three decades, there has been an increasing trend in the globalization of finance as the world economy became more closely integrated. Technological innovations as well as search for new markets pushed cross-border capital flows to unprecedented heights with a good amount of volatility. The abundance of liquidity at world level has led to the appreciation of asset, currency and commodity prices not only in developed economies but also in emerging economies as well. The recent financial crisis brought that era of rapid growth to a halt with serious consequences on the real sector, GDP growth and employment. The international flow of finance responds to a wide range of factors including macroeconomic conditions, regulatory frame work, saving pattern and investor expectations. Therefore, any policy response requires an accurate understanding of the nature, causes and consequences of the flow of finance between countries which will help in improving the effectiveness of the tools for mitigating their risks without negating their financial and developmental benefits. At this juncture the main focus of this conference is to bring together the researchers and academicians to discuss the relevant issues in the area of international money and finance.

The purpose of the conference is to promote research in the areas of international money and finance and the meet is expected to be a good platform for academicians and practitioners to exchange ideas and research findings on contemporary issues in the field. In addition to serving as an academic platform where the latest research in international money and finance can be shared, the conference is also intended to act as a platform for discussing the opportunities and challenges facing all participants in the global financial markets in general and emerging markets in particular.
